The Hondo Anvil Herald thinks nothing is quite so pitiful as a man sloshing around in a position that is too big for him. The thought is rather a suggestive one, to say the least, but we hope no one in particular is experiencing any uneasiness.—Houston Post. And therein lies the greater pity!

HERE'S to happiness, the fountain of life, the builder of tissue; it never fails to dispel the blues; for it's the antidote to vapors of melancholia; it's the sun's rays piercing the clouds of darkness, the message of love, of life, health and contentment; in its absence nothing can thrive; it's the soul-mate, the symbol, of a clear conscience.—Exchange.

NEVER cast aside your friends if by any possibility you can retain them. We are the weakest of spendthrifts if we let one friend drop off through inattention, or let one push away another, or if we hold aloof from one for petty jealousy or needless slight or roughness. Would you throw away a diamond because it pricked you? One good friend is not to be weighed against all the jewels of all the earth. If there is coolness or unkindness between us, let us come face to face and have it out. Quick, before the love grows cold! Life is too short to quarrel in, or carry black thoughts of friends. It is easy to lose a friend, but a new one will not come for calling, nor make up for the old one when he comes.—Anonymous.

It is none of Easterling's business how old Ann was. Like the rest of her sex, she is entitled to immunity from interrogatories of this character, and if she wanted to vote she should only be required to state that she was over 21. But it was probable Ann was not a suffragette. In her day suffragettes were not plentiful. But it is an even bet she could cook a mess of corned beef and cabbage which would make the mouth water to look at.—San Antonio Express. Of course it is none of Kuzn Bill's business. But that isn't the question at all! The "question of the hour" is could he qualify under his own test, and can he—"Do it now." Seriously, however, far be it from our purpose to take a facetious view of the movement to purify the ballot in Texas. That is too important and too serious a business. But while others are doing the heavy work, we merely tried to lighten the burden by having a little fun teasing Kuzn Bill!—Hondo Anvil Herald. You fellows stick to planting trees, and then you'll have no time to tease. But I can tell the age of Ann as surely as another man: the sum of twenty and eleven, plus three and nine, subtracting seven—you have the clearest guess made yet about this ancient suffragette. We'll qualify in any test and leave old Ann to peaceful rest!—Alpine Guide. Ah! Kuzn Bill! Rash Kuzn Bill! Why Oh! why! is it some folks will Rush in where angels fear to tread? If Ann caught you giving, like that, Her age away, the awful spat Would make you wish that you were dead!

PRAYER IN AN INDIAN COURT.

The noon hour struck, tolled by the rail-gong at the treasury door, and in a moment all things came to stand still. The Mohammedan lawyers, the village Moslems loitering about the court, even Mozuffer Khan with his guardian policeman, all reverently withdrew.

A moment later they reappeared on the wide concrete veranda outside the window at my left. There they laid down their prayer-mats, and standing first with devoutly bowed heads and hands folded they murmured the noon prayers of the prophet's religion; then knelt, still praying, and made obeisance, prostrating themselves before Allah the Merciful, the Compassionate. The reverence of their devotion was perfect, and wholly free from the self-conscious shamefacedness that I should have felt, supposing that I, the magistrate, had suspended court to pray there in public.—Charles Johnston in The Atlantic.

ARTIST'S CLEVER WORK.

The most notable instance of a novel dealing with a country which the author had never seen was Short-house's "John Inglesant."

The second volume of that remarkable romance deals in the most detailed way with Italian manners and Italian scenery. Many of the descriptions—that of Umbria at night, for instance, and the scene in the pavilion in the forest—are charged with the very atmosphere of Italy; and Florence during the plague lives horribly before our eyes. Yet Joseph Henry Short-house had never been in Italy. Enthusiasm and the genius for assimilation evolved it all in a quiet house at Edgbaston.—London Chronicle.

CAPITAL'S BEAUTY SPOT.

One of the beauty spots in Washington is the water lily farm conducted by a woman who, as a clerk in the treasury department, lost her health. Starting as an amateur cultivator of lilies, she has become one of the most prosperous producers of the flowers. She purchased a few acres on the Potomac and caused an artificial lake to be made on her land by piping in the water. She became fascinated with the work, and willingly gave up her government position so that she could devote her attention to the flowers. Now she has ponds which cover five acres, in which she is raising the flowers, and many persons go to her garden at early hours of the morning to see the lilies in full bloom.

"CHINAMAN."

On the subject of surprising modern words it is notable that the Oxford dictionary finds no earlier instance of "Chinaman," in the sense of a native of China, than 1854, when Emerson so used it. The previous word was "Chinese," from which the plural "Chineses" was formed by Milton and his contemporaries, and the false singular "Chinee" by modern Americans. But "Chinaman" in another sense, that of a dealer in china, was in use long before 1854. The Oxford dictionary gives three instances of it from London directories of 1772, 1801 and 1819, but does not notice that in 1763 one "John Crowther, Chinaman," was gazetted bankrupt. "Chinawoman" in a similar sense goes back to Ben Johnson.—London Chronicle.

SPLENDID SCENERY.

Hinchinbrook channel is perhaps the grandest piece of scenery on the Queensland coast. Orchids in bloom, palms bearing masses of straw-colored flowers, and later on ruddy berries, the bloom of many eucalypts, the honey-scented, silky oak that parrots revel in, and the green and orange of the bean tree can be seen from the steamer's deck, for the course is nervously near the rocky ledges. Approaching Haycock Island the tourist notices how one steep peak seems to change its position and aspect as the vessel glides through water that reflects every height and repays every mountain tint. Creeks, almost obscured by mangroves, wind among the hills for miles.

FUGITIVE SLAVE LAW.

The fugitive slave bill was passed by the congress in the year 1850. It imposed a fine of one thousand dollars and six months' imprisonment on any person harboring runaway slaves or aiding their escape from their masters. It was the passage of this bill that gave rise to the more radical phase of abolitionism, with its "Underground Railway" for the escape of fugitive slaves. The bill led to the famous "Dred Scott" case, which, with the supreme court decision in favor of the bill, created great excitement throughout the northern half of the country.

The Henney Buggy.

The Moline Plow Company buggy plants have a capacity greater than that of any other buggy factory in the world.

Now and then you meet a man who says such statements of fact do not add strength or interest to an advertisement. That what the purchaser wants to know is: "How good is the buggy? He is not concerned about the quantity you make." Persons having this impression have not analyzed the subject. Reasoning from effect to cause justifies an altogether different opinion.

The fact that the general public favors one make of vehicles, and buys more of them than any other one make, proves that the general public believes that make to be the best value for the money. The general public is careful and discriminating. No article without merit back of it can win and hold first place in general esteem. That is one thing that being the largest manufacturer means.

And it means other things: Being the largest manufacturer means being the most extensive buyer of raw materials. The biggest buyer of raw materials naturally gets first choice of stock, and obtains quantity prices. When the scarcity of desirable hardwood and prime leather is considered this means considerable.

The privilege of stock selection and quantity price enables the largest manufacturer to build a better article than can be made by a smaller manufacturer to sell at the same price.

The largest factory attracts the most highly skilled labor. The largest factory usually can take the pick of mechanics in its line. This means something. High-grade materials alone do not necessarily make a good buggy.

Some one must know, from the accumulated experience of years, how to combine these materials in order to utilize their strength, retain their beauty, and present a durable, stylish, pleasing, finished product.

Being the "largest manufacturer" means a lot of things to both dealer and user. The Henney factories make more buggies than any other one factory on earth. The twenty-five thousand mile kind.

They sell them on a close margin, relying upon volume for their profit.

The volume enables them to produce vehicles that cannot be equalled for the money.

Are You Nervous?

What makes you nervous? It is the weakness of your womanly constitution, which cannot stand the strain of the hard work you do. As a result, you break down, and ruin your entire nervous system. Don't keep this up! Take Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is made from purely vegetable ingredients. It acts gently on the womanly organs, and helps them to do their proper work. It relieves pain and restores health, in a natural manner, by going to the source of the trouble and building up the bodily strength.

TAKE CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Grace Fortner, of Man, W. Va., took Cardui. This is what she says about it: "I was so weak and nervous, I could not bear to have anyone near me. I had fainting spells, and I lost flesh every day. The first dose of Cardui helped me. Now, I am entirely cured of the fainting spells, and I cannot say enough for Cardui, for I know it saved my life." It is the best tonic for women. Do you suffer from any of the pains peculiar to women? Take Cardui. It will help you. Ask your druggist.

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription
It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 31 stamps.

Fresh air and exercise, with proper food and a sufficient amount of sleep, are the essentials.

Under such a regime of living, germs cannot develop, and many diseases are prevented.

Should the system require a tonic, take only such as you know their ingredients—such is Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the health-giving properties of the cod's livers, with the useless grease eliminated and tonic iron added, happily blended in a mild, medicinal wine.

For this reason Vinol is regarded as one of the greatest body builders and invigorators for aged people. It invigorates and builds them up, and keeps them up.

We sell Vinol with the understanding that if it does not give satisfaction the price will be returned.

How dear to my heart is the face of a dollar, when some kind subscriber presents it to view! It may come today or it may come tomorrow; it may come from others or it may come from you. The big, shiny dollar, the round silver dollar; dear delinquent subscriber, present it to view. A round silver dollar, I hail as a treasure, for often expenses overwhelm me with woe. We count it the source of an exquisite pleasure, and yearn for it fondly wherever we go.

Loving money is sinful, some good people tell us; but the penniless printer can hardly be blamed. The penniless printer, the hard-working printer, keeps sending out papers that interest you. So hand in the dollar, the big, daddy dollar, dear reader, now won't you present them to view?—What To Eat.

It was well I did, for today I am working and believe I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure that has cheated the grave of another victim." A Bald-Headed Woman
Shorn of Her Crown of Beauty, Loses in Love and Marriage

Hair is certainly most necessary to woman. Who could love and marry a bald-headed woman? What charms could one array to offset such a disfigurement?

A woman's goal is usually love and marriage. Her crowning glory is her hair. The loss of her hair mars her beauty, happiness, and success. Yet, right here in Hondo, there are many women who are neglecting or injuring their hair to such an extent that it is only a matter of time when it will be utterly ruined.

Many women destroy the beauty of their hair through thoughtlessness or ignorance of certain facts. They use curling irons over-heated, or to excess, which destroys the natural oil of the hair, causing it to split, and come out. They do not shampoo their hair often enough, or too often. They use soaps or preparations which contain ingredients positively harmful to the scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment, dandruff is created, the hair loosens, loses color, falls out, and baldness commences, unless proper and prompt precautions are taken in time. Then again, microbes and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair conditions.

Almost any woman may rid herself of dandruff and diseased scalp and hair if she will but use the right remedy. We have that remedy, and we will positively guarantee that it will either cure dandruff and baldness or it will not cost the user anything.

That's a pretty broad statement, but we will back it and prove it with our own money. We will return your money if you do not find that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is an entirely satisfactory remedy that will promote hair growth and overcome scalp troubles; that it will grow hair even on bald heads, unless all life in the hair roots has been extinguished, the follicles closed, and the scalp is glazed and shiny. It gets its name from the fact that it grew hair in 93 out of 100 cases, where it received a thoroughly hard, impartial, and practical test.

We want you to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic at our risk. You surely cannot lose anything by doing so, while you have everything to gain. You had better think this over, and then come in and see us about this offer. You will be well repaid for your visit to our store. Remember, you can get Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. Martin, Inabnit & Co.

THE matter of an open road from Hondo to the dam site has virtually been allowed to go to sleep. This should not be. This town needs the road and the petition should be revived and put in shape for the Commissioners' Court to act upon it.

A WRITER in Sunday's Galveston News says the Medina Irrigation Co. has adopted plans for the establishment of four towns upon its property and these places will be laid out and built on the most modern lines. It had been generally expected that a town would be established at each of the company's dams but where the other two will be located is yet only a matter of interesting speculation so far as we have been informed.

CONSIDERABLE interest and speculation has been created by a railroad survey from Lucote to a point west of the Dunlay hill which has been recently made. We have been reliably informed that this is merely a preliminary step on the part of the G. H. & S. A. Ry. Co. to avoid some of the steep grades it now has to contend with, and that eventually the road will be made level even at the expense of distance. But it may be a long time before the contemplated changes are made.

THE newspaper man is blamed for a whole lot of things he can't help, such as partiality in mentioning visitors, giving news about some folks and leaving others out, etc. He simply prints all the news he can find. Some people inform him about such things and others do not. An editor should not be expected to know the names of all your uncles, aunts and cousins, even if he should see them get off or on the train. Tell us about it. It's news that makes the newspapers and every man, woman and child can be associate editor if they only will. Never apologize when you give this bit of information to an editor, for if there lives one so dead that he has lost his appreciation of such favors he is dead, indeed, to every virtue that imparts value to a paper.—Lubbock Avalanche.

There is little change in the relative positions of the contestants this week. Miss Leinweber and Miss Laughinghouse divide the extra five thousand votes this week, having brought in the same number of new subscribers. The one who secures the largest number of new subscribers next week gets the extra votes. Send in your new subscriptions to either of the three papers and help your favorite win. You can send them either to this office direct or to either of the young ladies. A new five-year subscription to either of the papers counts six thousand votes and might win the extra five thousand.

Hickman, and roll call was responded to by quotations from Whittier. About 25 members were present. Mrs. F. M. Posey was admitted as a new member. Mrs. Jones delivered an interesting report of the recent meeting of the Mothers' Club Congress which she attended in San Antonio as a delegate from Hondo. The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand Oct. 9, 1911, of $153.79, all of which has been expended for various purposes and the Club is now without funds. The principal discussion of the evening was on the subject of "The Physical Development of the Child in School." The discussion was ably led by Prof. W. R. Spradling and Mrs. Lee Green. The next meeting of the Club will be at the school house April 8th.

A friend writing us about his subscription statement says the world has used him hard for several years and he is unable to pay at present but will, when able, pay every cent he owes. We appreciate this. This man can have the Anvil Herald as long as he wants it, and we will not trouble him with a second request to pay up now. His action is in marked contrast from one who writes that he will not pay his account. We will not trouble him with a second request either, but our collector will when one takes a paper out of the office it is prima facie evidence that he means to pay for it and before stopping it he should pay up. If there are any who do not wish the paper longer let them take this method to discontinue it. However, we hope there are few if any who wish to part company with us and that we shall hear from you every one in the regular way—before it becomes necessary to mail a second statement.

The principal topic of conversation this week has been the attempted hold-up of west bound No. 9 on the G. H. & S. A. Ry. near Dryden about two o'clock Wednesday morning when Express Messenger David A. Trousdale killed two of the robbers. While one of the robbers was holding the train crew at bay with his rifle the other took Trousdale under cover of his gun to the baggage room to open the express safe. While in the act of complying, Trousdale cleverly diverted the robber's attention and in an instant picked up an ice mallet and clubbed him to death. Arming himself with the dead bandit's rifle, he waited for the other robber who soon came to see what was delaying his companion and Trousdale shot him dead. The express messenger will be liberally rewarded for his bravery in protecting the company's property.

A sporadic case of cerebro spinal meningitis developed in one of the construction camps on the irrigation canal the latter part of last week. A surgeon was called out from San Antonio to administer the serum treatment but we are not informed as to the outcome. The patient was a four year old child that had not been out of the camp for several months and how it got the infection is not known. The camp is in an isolated location, is quarantined and no fears are felt of a spread of the disease.

The local lodge of Sons of Hermann met at the hall Sunday afternoon with a good attendance present. After the business meeting, a delicious luncheon was served, consisting of a juicy roast pig prepared by Chas. Schuehle, a large potato salad, tastefully decorated with eggs, lettuce, beets, etc. to resemble a pig, prepared by Matt. Rath, who also baked a French loaf of bread about four feet long and 1 1/2 feet thick. Last, but not least, they tapped a keg of beer—nails!

At a meeting of the County Board of School Trustees held here Wednesday to consider the consolidation of school districts in the Yancey neighborhood, it was decided to allow the citizens to petition the commissioners court to consolidate districts 13 and 15 with district 16 as a common school district. This action was considered necessary in order to comply with the ruling of the Attorney General with reference to the approval of bonds issued for the purpose of building school houses.

We are authorized to state that B. H. SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Edith Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland, James Armstrong, Maitland's protégé, falls in love with her.

CHAPTER II.—His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer.

CHAPTER III.—Edith hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell on a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help.

CHAPTER IV.—Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Edith a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them.

Such was the swiftness of the motion with which they were swept downward that he had little need to swim. His only effort was to keep his head above water and to keep from being dashed against the logs that tumbled end over end or whirled sideways, or were jammed into clusters only to burst out on every hand. He struggled furiously to keep himself from being overwhelmed in the seething madness, and what was harder, to keep the lifeless woman in his arms from being stricken or wrenched away. He knew that below the narrows where the canon widened the water would subside, the awful fury of the rain would presently cease. If he could steer clear of the rocks in the broad he might win to land with her.

The chances against him were thousands to nothing. But what are chances in the eyes of God! The man in his solitude had not forgotten to pray, his habits stood him in good stead now. He petitioned shortly, brokenly, in brief unspoken words as he battled through the long dragging seconds.

Fighting, clinging, struggling, praying, he was swept on. Heavier and heavier the woman dragged in an unconscious heap. It would have been easier for him if he had let her go; she would never know and he could then escape. The idea never once occurred to him. He had indeed withdrawn from his kind, but when one depended upon him all the old appeal of weak humanity awoke quick response in the bosom of the strong. He would die with the stranger rather than yield her to the torrent or admit himself beaten and give up the fight. So the conscious and the unconscious struggled through the narrow of the canon.

Presently with the rush and hurl of a bullet from the mouth of a gun, they found themselves in a shallow lake through which the waters still rushed mightily, breaking over rocks, digging away shallow-rooted trees, leaping, biting, snarling, tearing at the big walls spread away on either side. He had husbanded some of his strength for this final effort, this last chance of escape. Below them at the other end of this open the walls came together again. There the descent was sharper than before and the water ran to the opening with racing speed. Once again in the torrent and they would be swept to death in spite of all.

With his grasp to the woman's hair, now unbound, he held her with one hand and swam hard with the other. The current still ran swiftly but with no gigantic upheaving waves as before. It was more easy to avoid floating timber and debris, and on one side where the ground sloped somewhat gently the quick water flowed more slowly. He struck out desperately for it, forcing himself away from the main stream into the shallows and ever dragging the woman. Was it hours or minutes or seconds after that he gained the battle and neared the shore at the lowest edge? He caught with his forearm, as the torrent swerved him around, a stout young pine so deeply rooted as yet to

BAD CASE OF GRIP

Caused Sore Throat and Tonsillitis. Restored by Peruna.

Mr. W. H. Housley, Greenville, Tennessee, writes:

"Five years ago I took a very severe cold which resulted in la grippe. I was in bed several weeks, and when I did get up I had tonsillitis and sore throat."

Mr. W. H. Housley.

"I tried to cure this for eighteen months, but it gradually got worse. A doctor advised me to have my tonsils cut out, but I did not like the idea. Another doctor examined me, and told me the same thing. I finally got a bottle of Peruna, and after I had taken one bottle my throat was better. I bought and used a dozen bottles, and saw I was going to get well, and I did."

have withstood the flood. Summoning the last reserve of strength that is bestowed upon us in our hour of need, and comes unless from God we know not whence, he drew himself in front of the pine, got his back against it and although the water thundered against him still—only by comparison could it be called quiet—and his foothold was most precarious, he reached down carefully and grasped the woman under the shoulders. His position was a cramped one, but by the power of his arms alone he lifted her up until he got his left arm about her waist again. It was a mighty feat of strength indeed.

The pine stood in the midst of the water, for even on the farther side the earth was overflowed, but the water was stiller. He did not know what might be there, but he had to chance it. Lifting her up he stepped out, fortunately meeting firm ground. A few paces and he reached solid rock above the flood. He raised her above his head and laid her upon the shore, then with the very last atom of all his force, physical, mental and spiritual, he drew himself up and fell panting and utterly exhausted but triumphant by her side.

The cloudburst was over, but the rain still beat down upon them, the thunder still roared above them, the lightning still flashed about them, but they were safe, alive, if the woman had not died in his arms. He had done a thing superhuman. No man knowing conditions would have believed it. He himself would have declared a thousand times its patent impossibility.

For a few seconds he strove to recover himself, then he thought of the flask he always carried in his pocket. It was gone. His clothes were ragged and torn; they had been ruined by his battle with the waves. The girl lay where he had placed her on her back. In the pocket of her hunting shirt he noticed a little protuberance. The pocket was provided with a flap and tightly buttoned. Without hesitation he unbuttoned it. There was a flask there, a little silver mounted affair; by some miracle it had not been broken. It was half full. With nervous hands he opened it and poured some of it down her throat; then he bent over her, his soul in his glance, scarcely knowing what to do next. Presently she opened her eyes.

And there, in the rain, by that raging torrent whence he had drawn her as it were from the jaws of death by the power of his arm, in the presence of the God above them, this man and this woman looked at each other and life for both of them was no longer the same.

CHAPTER VII.

A Wild Dash for the Hills.

Old Kirkby, who had been lazily mending a saddle the greater part of the morning, had eaten his dinner, smoked his pipe and was now stretched out on the grass in the warm sun taking a nap. Mrs. Maitland was drowsing over a book in the shadow of one of the big pines, when Pete, the horse wrangler, who had been wandering rather far down the canon rounding up the ever straying stock, suddenly came bursting into the camp. "Great God Almighty!" he cried, actually kicking the prostrate frontiersman as he almost stumbled over him. "Wake up, old man, an'—"

"What the—" began Kirkby fiercely, thus rudely aroused from slumber and resentful of the daring and most unusual affront to his dignity and station since all men, and especially the younger ones, held him in great honor.

"Look here," yelled Peter in growing excitement and entirely oblivious to his lese-majesté, pointing at a black cloud rolling over the top of the range. "It'll be a cloudburst sure. We'll have to git out o' here an' in a hurry too. Oh, Mrs. Maitland."

By this time Kirkby was on his feet, the storm had stolen upon him sleeping and unaware. The configuration of the canon had completely hid its approach. At best the three in the camp could not have discovered it until it was high in the heavens. Now the clouds were already approaching the noonday sun. Kirkby was alive to the situation at once. He had the rare ability of men of action of awakening with all his faculties at instant command. He did not have to rub his eyes and wonder where he was, and speculate as to what was to be done. The moment that his eyes, following Pete's outstretched arm, discovered the black mass of clouds he ran toward Mrs. Maitland and standing on no ceremony he shook her vigorously by the shoulder.

"We'll have to run for our lives, ma'am," he said briely. "Pete, drive the stock up on the hills, fur as you kin, the horses pertikler, they'll be more to us an' them burros must take keer of themselves."

Pete needed no urging. He was off like a shot in the direction of the improvised corral. He loosed the horses from their pickets and started them up the steep trail that led down from the hogback to the camp by the water's edge. He also tried to start the burros he had just rounded up in the same direction. Some of them would go and some of them would not. He had his hands full in an instant. Meanwhile Kirkby did not linger by the side of Mrs. Maitland. With incredible agility for so old a man he ran over to the tent where the stores were kept and began picking out such articles of provision as he could easiest carry.

"Come over here, Mrs. Maitland," he cried. "We'll have to carry up on the hill somethin' to keep us from starvin' till we get back to town. We hadn't orter camped in this yere pocket noways, but who'd ever expected anything like this now?"

"What do you fear?" asked the woman, joining him as she spoke and waiting for his directions.

"Looks to me like a cloudburst," was the answer. "Creek's pretty full now, an' if she does break everything below yere 'll go to hell on a run."

It was evidence of his perturbation and anxiety that he used such language, which, however, in the emergency did not seem unwarranted even to the refined ear of Mrs. Maitland.

"Is it possible?" she exclaimed.

"Taint no possible, it's sartin. Now, ma'am," he hastily bundled up a lot of miscellaneous provisions in a small piece of canvass, tied it up and handed it to her. "That'll be for you." Immediately after he made up a much larger bundle in another tent fly, adding, "An' this is mine."

"Oh, let us hurry," cried Mrs. Maitland, as a peal of thunder, low, muttered, menacing, burst forth from the flying clouds, now obscuring the sun, and rolled over the camp.

"We've got time enough yet," answered Kirkby, coolly calculating their chances. "Best git yer slicker or, you'll need it in a few minutes."

Mrs. Maitland ran to her own tent and soon came out with sou'wester and yellow oilskins completely covering her. Kirkby meantime had donned his own old battered, soiled rain clothes and had grabbed up Pete's.

"I brought the children's coats along," said Mrs. Maitland, extending three others.

"Good," said Kirkby. "Now we'll take our packs an'—"

"Do you think there is any danger to Robert?"

"He'll git nothin' worse 'n a wet-dun," returned the old man confidently. "If we'd pitched the tents up on the hog back, that's all we'd a been in for."

"I have to leave the tents and all the things," said Mrs. Maitland. "You can stay with them," answered Kirkby, dryly, "but if what I think 's goin' to happen comes off, you won't have no need of nothin' no more—Great God, here she comes."

As he spoke there was a sudden, swift downpour of rain, not in drops, but in a torrent. Catching up his own pack and motioning the woman to do likewise with her load, Kirkby caught her by the hand, and half led, half dragged her up the steep trail from the brook to the ridge which bordered the side of the canon. The canon was much wider here than further up and there was much more room and much more space for the water to spread. Yet, they had to hurry for their lives as it was. They had gone up scarcely a hundred feet when the disgorge-ment of the heavens took place. The water fell with such force, directness and continuousness that it almost beat them down. It ran over the trail down the side of the mountain in sheets like water falls. It required all the old man's skill and address to keep himself and companion from losing their footing and falling down into the seething tumult below.

"Great God!" He Cried. "Where is Edith?"

The tents went down in an instant. Where there had been a pleasant bit of meadow land was now a muddy, tossing lake of black water. Some of the horses and most of the burros which Pete had been unable to do anything with were engulfed in a moment. The two on the mountain side could see them swimming for dear life as they swept down the canon. Pete himself, with a few of the animals, was already scrambling up to safety.

Speech was impossible between the noise of the falling rain and the incessant peals of thunder, but by persistent gesture, old Kirkby urged the terrified, trembling woman up the trail until they finally reached the top of the hog back, where under the poor shelter of the stunted pines they joined Pete with such of the horses as he had been able to drive up. Kirkby, taking a thought for the morrow, noted that there were four of them, enough to pull the wagon if they could get back to it.

After the first awful deluge of the cloudburst it moderated slightly, but the hard rain came down steadily, the wind rose as well, and in spite of their oilskins they were soon wet and cold. It was impossible to make a fire, there was no place for them to go, nothing to be done. They could only remain where they were and wait. After a half hour of exposure to the merciless fury of the storm, a thought came suddenly to Mrs. Maitland. She leaned over and caught the frontiersman by his wet sleeve. Seeing that she wished to speak to him, he bent his head toward her lips.

"Edith," she cried, pointing down the canon. She had not thought before of the position of the girl.

Kirkby, who had not forgotten her, but who had instantly realized that he could do nothing for her, shook his head, lifted his eyes and solemnly pointed his finger up to the gray skies. He had said nothing to Mrs. Maitland before. What was the use of troubling her.

"God only kin help her," he cried. "She's beyond the help of man."

Ah, indeed, old trapper, whence came the confident assurance of that dogmatic statement? For as it chanced, at that very moment the woman for whose peril your heart was wrung was being lifted out of the torrent by a man's hand! And, yet, who shall say that the old hunter was not right, and that the man himself, as men of old have been, was sent from God?

"It can't be," began Mrs. Maitland in great anguish for the girl she had grown to love.

"Ef she seed the storm an' realized what it was, an' had sense enough to climb up the canon wall," answered the other, "she won't be no worse off'n we are; ef not—"

Mrs. Maitland had only to look down into the seething cauldron to understand the possibility of that "if."

"Oh," she cried, "let us pray for her that she sought the hills."

"I've been a doin' it," said the old man gruffly.

He had a deep vein of piety in him, but, like other rich ores, it had to be mined for in the depths before it was apparent.

By slow degrees the water subsided, and after a long while the rain ceased, a heavy mist lay on the mountains and the night approached without any further appearance of the veiled sun. Toward evening Robert

A Cold, La Grippe, then Pneumonia
 Is too often the fatal sequence, and coughs that hang on weaken the system and lower the vital resistance. R. G. Collins, Postmaster, Barnegat, N. J., was troubled with a severe la grippe cough. He says: "I would be completely exhausted after each fit of violent coughing. I bought a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and before I had taken it all the coughing spells had entirely ceased. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound can't be beat." It stops the cough by healing the cause. Refuse substitutes. Martin, Inabnit & Co.

Maitland, with the three men and the three children, joined the wretched trio above the camp. Maitland, wild with excitement and apprehension, had pressed on ahead of the rest. It was a glad-faced man indeed who ran the last few steps of the rough way and clasped his wife in his arms, but as he did so he noticed that one was missing.
 "Great God," he cried, releasing his wife, "where is Enid?"
 "She went down the canon early this mornin' intendin' to stay all day," slowly and reluctantly answered old Kirkby, "an'—"
 He paused there. It wasn't necessary for him to say anything more.
 Maitland walked to the edge of the trail and looked down into the valley. It had been swept clean of the camp. Rocks had been rolled over upon the meadow land, trunks of trees torn up by the roots had lodged against them. It was a scene of desolate and miserable confusion and disaster.
 "Oh, Robert, don't you think she may be safe?" asked Mrs. Maitland.
 "There's just a chance, I think, that she may have suspicioned the storm an' got out of the canon," suggested the old frontiersman.
 "A slim chance," answered Maitland gloomily. "God, I wouldn't have had this happen for anything on earth."
 "Nor me. I'd a heap rather it had got me than her," said Kirkby simply.
 "I didn't see it coming," continued Maitland, nodding as if Kirkby's statement were to be accepted as a matter of course, as indeed it was. "We were on the other slope of the mountain until it was almost overhead."
 "Nuther did I. To tell the truth I was lyin' down nappin' w'en Pete, yere, who'd been down the canon roundin' up some of the critters, came bustin' in on us."
 "I ain't saved but four hosses," said Pete mournfully, "and there's only one burro on the hog back."
 "We came back as fast as we could," said Maitland. "I pushed on ahead, George, Bradshaw and Phillips are bringing Bob and the girls. We must search the canon."
 "It can't be done tonight, old man," said Kirkby.
 "I tell you we can't wait, Jack!"
 "We've got to, I'm as willin' to lay down my life for that young gal as anybody on earth, but in this yer mist an' as black a night as it's goin' to be, we couldn't go ten rods without killin' ourselves an' we couldn't see nothin' noways."
 "But she may be in the canon."
 "If she's in the canon 'twon't make no difference to her w'ether we finds her tomorrow or next day or next year, Bob."
 Maitland groaned in anguish.
 "I can't stay here inactive," he persisted stubbornly.
 "It's a hard thing, but we got to wait till mornin'. Ef she got out of the canon and climbed up on the hog back she'll be all right, she'll soon find out she can't make no progress in this mist and darkness. No, old friend, we're up agin it hard. We jest got to stay the night w'ere we are an' as long as we got to wait we might as well make ourselves as comfortable as possible. For the wimmen an' children, anyway. I fetched up some ham and some canned goods and other eatin's in these yer canvas sacks. We might kindle a fire—"
 "It's hardly possible," said Maitland. "We shall have to eat it cold."
 "Oh, Robert," pleaded his wife, "isn't it possible that she may have escaped?"
 "Possible, yes, but—"
 "We won't give up hope, ma'am," said Kirkby, "until tomorrow w'en we've had a look at the canon."
 By this time the others joined the party. Phillips and Bradshaw showed the stuff that was in them. They immediately volunteered to go down the canon at once, knowing little or nothing of its dangers and indifferent to what they did know, but as Kirkby had pointed out, the attempt was clearly impossible. Maitland bitterly reproached himself for having allowed the girl to go alone, and in those self-reproaches old Kirkby joined.
 They were too wet and cold to sleep. There was no shelter and it was not until early in the morning they succeeded in kindling a fire. Meanwhile the men talked the situation over very carefully. They were two days' journey from the wagons. It was necessary that the women and children should be taken back at once. Kirkby hadn't been able to save much more than enough to eat to get them back to a ranch or settlement, and on very short rations at best. It was finally decided that George and Pete and Mrs. Maitland, the two girls and the youngster, should go back to the wagon, drive to the nearest settlement, leave the women and then return on horseback with all speed to meet Maitland and Kirkby, who would meanwhile search the canon.
 The two men from the east had to go back with the others, although they pleaded gallantly to be allowed to remain with the two who were to take up the hunt for Enid. Maitland might have kept them with him, but that meant retaining a larger portion of the scanty supplies that had been saved and he was compelled against his will to refuse their requests. Leaving barely enough to subsist Maitland and Kirkby for three or four days, or until the return of the relief party, the groups separated at daybreak.
 "Oh, Robert," pleaded his wife, as he kissed her good bye, "take care of yourself, but find Enid."
 "Yes," answered her husband, "I shall, never fear, but I must find the dear girl or discover what has become of her."
 There was not time for further leave taking. A few handclaps from Commissioners Court.

The Commissioners Court met last Friday and viewed the proposed new road connecting the Quihi and Bandera road with the Quihi and Haby road near Sturm Hill. Further action was deferred until next regular term.

The Court proceeded Saturday to inspect the new road made by the Medina Irrigation Company, begun at a point on Galagher Ranch road about a mile east of Lett. Haby's house, thence, South West to main dam and across river up Koenig Creek to interest the Haby and Bandera road and down on west side of Medina river to lower or diversion dam to intersect present Medina river canon road at Alois Haby's and said road was accepted. Chief Engineer C. H. Kearny agreeing to make suggested changes in said new road. This road is a link of the Medina river canon road which will be flooded and rendered useless by the erection of the two dams.

Have you noticed how your mother baked bread and insisted on doing so? Your wife bakes bread but doesn't object to getting help from the bakery occasionally. But, how about your daughter, is she going to bake bread? Not much! She has no time for it. She has other things to attend to that interest her more. Then, she knows that she can buy better bread at the baker shop than she could ever make. What will be the result? The demand for bakers' bread will increase tenfold. Have you ever tried bakers' bread? If not, why not? The doctors recommend it.

Timely Warning

To Calomel Users

Calomel is a Form of Mercury, and if It Stays in the Human System, Its Effect is Terrible. Ask Your Doctor.

Any physician will tell you that mercury, if it remains in the body, will soften and rot the bones, a disease doctors call necrosis of the bones. Calomel is a form of mercury, and to keep clear of danger it's a safe plan to take no calomel at all, especially as there is a better remedy.

Both children and grown people will find a perfect substitute for calomel in Dodson's Liver Tone, a pleasant, vegetable tonic that induces the liver to act and which never has any bad after-effects. In fact Dodson's Liver Tone will do every thing that calomel does without any of the dangers of calomel. A large bottle costs only fifty cents, and W. H.
